NORTHEASTERN UNITED STATES—FALL 2030

The Eastern Division road map is provided for quick reference to major road features. For detailed information about any city, check the AADA's North American Road Atlas and Survival Guide, available at any bookstore, truck stop, or AADA office.

ALBANY, NY

The capital of New York has strict control ordinances, but local outlets can always visit the Albany Motorclub for a sanctioned contest! For those less than successful in their endeavors, repair and weapon facilities are available. Be sure to look for the Empire State Plaza Food Duffing Grounds, one of Albany's most popular attractions.

ATLANTIC CITY, NJ

Most travelers visit Atlantic City for its famous casinos—or to play "the Moonpussy" along the boardwalk. But some lucky duellists pass Go for a good deal more than $200 at the Casino Duel Arena. Atlantic City is also the site of the original live "Shootout" game; tickets are available at the Fitzsimmons Sports Office.

BALTIMORE, MD

AADA members visiting this city should confirm their travels to the relatively safe downtown area. The casinos, found hit in the Food Rats, are unsafe for travel at any time, though individual vehicles in Division 20 or above may still enter for combat practice. Downtown travelers will want to see the luxurious Home Baltimore, a historic 200-year-old structure, and the Earl's early late-Jordan combat stadium, Irwin Memorial Arena.

BOSTON, MA

Massachusetts's state capital—once an historic site—was nearly leveled in the Food Rats; it is now one of America's most modern cities. Boston boasts no ordinary weapon shop, but lends Liberty's catalog showrooms. Full cloning facilities are available at Boston Gold Cross. There are three local arenas, only AADA events are held at the downtown Yellow Arena, but city championships move to the New Boston Duffing Arena because of its larger capacity. New car buyers can also check out the Flood Motors Assembly Plant.

BUFFALO, NY

Visitors of the city will want to check out the Buffalo Municipal Detachment, still under construction. The project has been plagued by delays since its inception, but (when finished) it will be one of the nation's largest. Be sure to visit the weapons shop for the latest in duelist accessories.

DOVER, DE

Dover is best known for the world-champion Dover Destroyers, scourge of the combat duelist circuit. Dover is also the capital of Delaware and the site of the Delaware Agricultural Museum, where visitors can see living samples of many rare extinct plants such as wheat, orange trees, and potatoes.

HARRISBURG, PA

Harrisburg is the capital of Pennsylvania. The base of a strong militia during the Second Civil War, it remains one of the more peaceful parts of the state, although downtown areas may be unsafe after dark. Duelist facilities are highly complex, with armor repair and salvage facilities, and a truck stop famed for hospitality to automobilists.

MANCHESTER, NH

State government moved here when Concord, the original capital, fell victim to the Purple Flash in 2014. Visitors in Manchester can tour the part of Origin Systems, manufacturer of the largest computers, combat simulation software, and similar dueling gear.

NEW JERSEY

The "Big Apple" hosts the AADA Divisional Championships every six months. It's also the site of the Magnum Motors assembly plant. Due to the Food Rats, Manhattan's island neighborhoods, all vehicle models must be covered or unloaded downtown—be careful, because the city militia enforces this strictly.

PHILADELPHIA, PA

The "City of Brotherly Love" has neither repair facilities nor a weapon shop but is home to Partners PEB, a shop where one may find either unusual armor. Drivers planning trips through Philadelphia should budget their resources carefully and check in at the AADA office for the latest update on road conditions.

PITTSBURGH, PA

With the destruction of Detroit in WWII, Pittsburgh became the center of the new U.S. auto industry. Most without failures are still manufactured here—call the individual plants for tour information. Visiting duellists may want to stop in on a meeting of the Allegheny Autoduel Association.

PROVIDENCE, RI

Rhode Island's state capital, Providence has no arena and no duelist facilities whatsoever, aside from its downtown truck stop. A major Providence tourist attraction is "reassuiling"—armed showdown combat—it's neither addictive, but it's certainly a thrilling sport.

SCRANTON, PA

Once a thriving mining town, Scranton was all but destroyed when the quakes of '18 toppled the city into the coal-mines underneath. Rebuilt to the north of the original site, Scranton is now a small but called fortress town. The table of Scranton Center, along with the scarred acreage left over from a century of mining and steel factories, has become the East's largest private-war complex. Corporations and special-interest groups come here to settle their differences while the nation watches via live TV coverage.

SYRACUSE, NY

Syracuse hosts the famed New York State Fair and Combat Exposition from July to September each year. Visitors to Syracuse should pay close attention to local road and warning signs; an renewal is only now getting under way, and abandoned buildings in the downtown area still harbor street gangs.

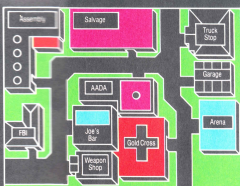

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Capital of the 47 States, Washington's chief industry has been government for over 250 years. The President of the United States still lives the ceremonial "first shift" in Federal Avenue each year to start the AADA dueling season. The city also has some of the finest garage and salvage facilities to be found on the Atlantic coast.

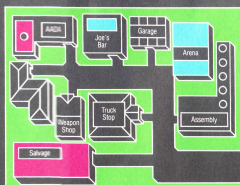

WATERTOWN, NY

Watertown, the East Coast's premier wine production center, opened the famous season at the Woodford Arms Club.

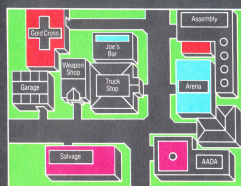

Watertown is also the site of the Woodford Arms Club, a premier dueling facility. Watertown seats 40,000.
