FUTURE...

Stellarly realistic-looking graphics and an amazing depth of play... the best flight simulation I have ever seen (and there's nothing on the visible horizon that looks set to come close). It's not a simulation, it's an experience... Dealer's first flight was a real buster! 22mp 99%.

Shadow Warriors

SHADOW WARRIORS, the latest, greatest and most ambitious martial arts run-up game, now opens onto your computer featuring interactive scenes, backgrounds! The secrets of the Ninjas' supernatural techniques have been handed down since the Meiji period, now they live on in the jungle of the American metropolis. A thousand years of the Ninjas' secrets at your fingertips... the Ninjas' Fighting Style: Flow, Combination, Flying, Kick, Break, Kick, Kick and more, give you a formidable, complete of stunning, moves. Take your techniques to the streets.

THE CORPS!

One of the Corps literally gets his brains picked by a very nasty alien while the others ponder as to whether it's time to get re-ally heavy!

25

Alongside the brilliant mosaic of tips and Turbicon maps, a Castle Master guide and a brilliant comic strip guide to the Final Fight's on tap.

PREVIEWS

What's happening? Well, turn to the Previews pages and focus your eyes on the future - The Boy Who Loved Me, P.O.S. Tour God! Unreal, Grand Slam Tennis, Corporation, Katakami the War, and Ruff 'n' Reddy are brand new titles premiering in these pages.

ARCADE ACTION

88

We take Sega's latest hydraulic monster, G-Lad for a test fight, and find in the sheer ferocity of two brand new shoot 'em ups, Lightning Fighters and Segas.

THANKS

A big thanks this month to PC Engine Supplies, who supplied us with Megadrive games for review.

REVIEWS INDEX

THE RATINGS

When a game is reviewed, we give ratings for five different criteria:

GRAPHICS

Does the game look good? Is the scrolling smooth? Are the sprites lively? This mark covers all visual aspects of the game.

SOUND

Sound and music that enhance a game are given high marks. The sound rating is low if the soundtrack or effects are inappropriate.

VALUE

Here, we take into consideration the price of the game, the amount of entertainment it offers and the quality of the packaging. In other words - is it worth the money?

PLAYABILITY

This tells you how addictive and enjoyable the game is. The higher the rating is, the more playable the game is.

OVERALL

The most important rating of all. This is what we think of the game as a whole, taking into consideration all the other ratings. In short, how good the game really is.

THE MARKS

85+

A (5-VG) HT! An outstanding game that shouldn't be missed.

70-85

A very good game that missed out on a higher accolade due to minor discrepancies. Should definitely be tried, though.

55-69

Average to fairly good. Could still appear to fans of the genre.

40-55

Below average to average. Certainly a disappointment.

15-39

Certainly a poor game that might even appear to be the most awful fare.

1-14

Ugh! Boring sewage that's guaranteed to make your computer throw up.

THE REVIEWERS

JULIAN RIGNALL

NEWS

A WHOLE NEW

The latest console on the block looks good and plays better - but at a cost, is this sleek black machine going to be a winner, or is its heavy price tag going to be a millstone around its neck? Paul Gnansey and Julian Rignall gave it a thorough testing...

SNK's Neo Geo is the latest and (in technical terms) the greatest addition to the blossoming console market. The actual hardware is leaps and bounds ahead of the Nintendo and PC Engines of this world, and in many respects it even leaves the 16-bit Mega-Drive standing.

At the heart of the system is a 16-bit Motorola 68000 central processor running at 12 MHz (almost twice as fast as that of the Atari ST and Amiga). This is supported by a 4 MHz 285A chip dedicated to running the sound hardware.

THANKS FOR THE MEMORY

The machine's on-board memory consists of 64K of RAM, 64K of screen memory and 64K of ROM. Such comparatively small amounts of memory might not sound that impressive, but remember that these are just the chips that keep the machine going. The games themselves come on enormous 19cm x 14cm x 2.5cm cartridges and contain two circuit boards packed with game chips that can hold up to 50 megabits of game code, graphics and sound! That's over 108 Spectrums (or thirteen Amigas' worth of memory)!

LOOKIN' GOOD

As for the Neo Geo's display capabilities, SNK have developed their own custom graphics chips which can produce several thousand colours at very high resolution. scroll the screen AND control up to 380 individual sprites which the hardware can expand or reduce to any size.

SOUNDING OUT

Like the Megadrive, this console features a stereo headphones socket which lets you fully appreciate its stunning sound features. There are facilities for super high quality FM, and digital PCM sounds which make for as-sounding soundtracks and tons of digitised speech.

The controller is one of the largest you'll ever see. Instead of the usual joystick, it has a very responsive solid metal joystick and an array of five fire buttons. Obviously, it's designed for tabletops rather than knees.

The final technical innovation is the facility to save your position in games on a smartcard, a 3 Meg credit card-sized widget which you get with the console. It just slots into the front of the machine, and no matter what game you're playing, you can stop the action and instantly log your progress so you can return to the same spot again and again. The card is also to be implemented on SNK's new line of coin-ops, so when you run out of testes you can save your position, remove your card and continue the same game at home (as long as you have the same game on a Neo Geo cartridge).

THE GAMES

The games that we tested were: Baseball Pro, a fabulous cartoon-style baseball game (surprise, surprise); Nam 1975, a graphically stunning one or simultaneous two-player cross between Cadal and Operation Wolf; and Magician Lord, a very big platform arcade adventure with huge end-of-level battles.

All three games feature superb graphics, incredible music and absolutely tons of speech, particularly Baseball Pro which simply has to be heard to be believed.

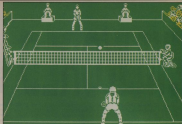

The potential for future games is enormous - and since the arcade games will be IDENTICAL to the home cartridges, you can check a game out down the arcades before you buy it.

ACHILLES' HEEL

The Neo Geo is definitely a stunning machine, but unfortunately suffers from one problem - its enormous price tag. The main unit will cost around £580.00 and games weigh in at a vast £120.00 each! However, if you haven't got that much money, don't fret too much. The distributors, DeGate Marketing are concentrating on setting up a rental system so you can hire the machine for weekends - or even longer. Sounds good to us!

the annual tournament at Wimbledon will be tearing its ugly head, and if you happen to be down Marble Arch way on the 30th June, the Soft will have something going on to what your estate, so to speak. They're running a Pro Tennis Tour competition in the Virgin store at 527-531 Oxford Street in which 84 competitors will battle it out to win some fab prizes, including tennis rackets and copies of the game. If you want to take part in this breathtaking event, get down to said virgin store by the 20th of June and put your name down. Be quick about it though, 'cos there's not a lotta time left!

Everybody's jumping on the World Cup bandwagon! Joystick makers Dynamica have released the Competition Pro Goal World Cup series of sticks - the same strong, durable stick as before, but now sporting the colours of a host of World Cup countries. There are ten different ones in all, and think, not only can you replay the 1996 England versus Italy final (well, that's what we're hoping!) on your favourite foxy game, but you can also use the same coloured sticks, too!

MISSION CONTROL

All you flight sim buffs will no doubt be ecstatic to hear that not only are Microsoft bringing out a second Falcon mission disk with new intercept missions and weaponry, but Activision are bringing out an extra disk for the acclaimed Fighter Bomber providing 14 more missions. Both will be out for ST, Amiga and PC in the summer.

THUNDER-STRUCK

Mindscape have snapped up the license to the latest Tom Cruise movie, Days of Thunder which, according to said Phil Harrison, is "a very good film". It's based on the devil-may-care exploits of a handsome stock car driver played by Mr Cruise, a feat of cloning which prompted Phil to describe the film as "Top Gun on the ground". Arguably (cf Starfighter and Afterburner lanes) are putting together the game, which should be a 3D road racer with lots of crash 'n burn action. The movie will be on general release from July 4th (Boom On The 4th Of July" as it were) and the game is due on C64, ST and Amiga (in September '91), with other versions following in October. We'll keep you posted on any further developments.

DID YOU KNOW..?

Here's a vaguely interesting fact. Jason Kingdale, a graphic artist currently employed by USi Gold, has not only created some of the snazziest pictures which you see on a stack of games, but he was also involved in production of the images seen in the video for Adamski's number one hit, Killer.

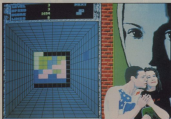

Using software, written by his brother Chris for the Amiga and ST, Jason, whose past successes include the graphics for Trivial Pursuit, Better Dead Than Alien and Hunt For Red October, was able to create those brilliant effects seen pulsating away behind the dancers on the promo. Let's hope that his current project, called Murder, is as spectacular. ah?

TETRIS II

They said it could be done. "Yes, yes, yes," they nayed. But it's happening. The follow-up to the best game ever is almost here, and it promises to be even better than the original! That crazy Comix, Akkai "Daple" Pajonov is working on the home versions of the sequel to Tetris. It's called Welltris, and it's set in a well. Again, the object is to create lines from falling blocks, only this time the lines can be either horizontal or vertical. There'll be variable difficulty levels, loads of weird and wonderfully-shaped blocks and, with a bit of luck, the same maddeningly addictive gameplay which the original "Block" Custer contains.

Now let's hope someone picks up the license for Tetris, the latest, terrifically playable installment in the arcade Tetris saga, which, in case you haven't seen it, is Tetris with hard

Find out its limits.
Look in the mirror.

Introducing the powerful new Atari 1040 STE. With such an awesome machine, we're convinced the only limits you'll come across are your own.

Based on the incredibly successful 1040 STFM, the 1040 STE itself goes beyond the limits of its predecessor.

The 'E', by the way, stands for 'Enhanced'. But once you've discovered its amazing array of features, you may consider 'Enhanced' to be the understatement of the decade.

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of the 1040 STE is its graphics. Its palette contains over 4000 colours (all right, 4096 to be exact).

To ensure precise and realistic images, the STE features 'hardware scrolling', enabling smooth scrolling in any direction and split-screen effects. And, with the SM124 monitor, you'll get razor sharp black-and-white text that's as clear as the type on this page.

To complete the picture, it is able to 'phase-lock' its video output to an external video source, permitting direct linking to a Genlocking device.

The 1040 won't just have your eyes swivelling in their sockets. Your eardrums will also take a pounding from the 8-bit PCM stereo sound.

The new PCM (Pulse Coded Modulation) sound system's two chips allow the 1040 STE to replay high-quality sampled sounds, in stereo, without burdening the CPU. Or, for even more of an earbusting, just add a couple of RCA output jacks and power the sounds through your own stereo.

Of course we mustn't forget memory. One megabyte of RAM comes as standard. If that's not enough, the 1040 STE provides four SIMM sockets. Simply plug in some SIMM (Single In-line Memory Module) boards and boost the RAM up to four megabytes.

To help you handle all this technology, we've added even more: a Blitter chip, capable of shifting data at high speeds independent of the CPU, and a new version of TOS.

The TOS 1.6 (operating system) has an enhanced file selector with drive-change buttons, improved desktop with file move, MS-DOS compatible disk formatting, and better application installation and auto-booting facilities.

As you'd expect, there's a huge range of peripherals including hard disks, floppy disks, laser printers, colour monitors and even Megaflo 44, Atari's unique 44-megabyte removable hard disk.

As well as all this hardware, there are hundreds of software programmes for the 1040 STE - we're even throwing in the ST-Series Productivity and Leisure bundles free.

The Productivity bundle features a database, spreadsheet, word processor and business graphics package, and there's S.T.A.C., First BASIC, Hyperpoint and Prince in the Leisure bundle.

If you're itching to get your hands on the controls, there are two 15-pin analogue controller ports (which accept paddles, lightguns and light-pens) and a 9-pin mouse port and joystick port.

With adaptors, up to six people can use the 1040 at one time. Just in case it's too much for one person to handle.

At £299.99 it certainly won't be too much for one person to afford.

The ideal computer at the ideal price, you may think. We think so, too. But there remains only one potential problem: not whether you'll make impossible demands of the 1040, but whether the 1040 will make impossible demands of you.

Please send me further details of the 1040 STE and other Atari products.

What's green, hard on the outside but soft and squishy on the inside, and can spin a nunchaku like nobody's business? A Teenage Mutant Hero Turtle, that's what. These stars of comic books, small AM2 big screen and even the Daily Mirror have at long last appeared on computer and, as usual, it's the dreaded Shredder and his obnoxious Foot Clan who are causing the heroes in a half-filled withlily amounts of detail.

In an attempt to catch the Turtles with their shells down, they've gone and kidnapped ace reporter April O'Neil from the TV studio where she works, and are hustling her around the city. So, after a brief talking-to from Master Splinter, the four go off in search for their friend. But even Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles don't have it easy at the time, especially in a city the size of New York. Sewers, streets and buildings form a complex maze for the Turtles to negotiate - and wherever they go, it's a sure bet that there'll be a Foot Clan posse waiting just around the corner.

The player controls the Turtles one character at a time through the city, which is displayed both in birds-eye view 3D when patrolling the city, and in a traditional top-

Energy is revitalised by picking up slices of the Turtle's favourite food - pizza - which can be found throughout the city, along with extra weapons which the Foot Clan have almost mindlessly dropped.

AMIGA
£24.99

If you've been expecting a straight continuation of the delicious four-player role-playing, you may be disappointed to find out that Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles is, in fact, taken from the Nintendo console game. That disappointment soon fades away though, when you discover that this game is a lot more involved than its arcade counterpart, requiring not only lightning-fast beat-able skills, but a fair smattering of tactical planning and mapping too. Ram Turtie has his own particular strengths and weaknesses, and if you choose the wrong dude for the job, it's quite likely that your character will get beaten. You can be frustrating in the early stages, but given time it becomes second nature as you begin to learn each Turtle's characteristics. Surprisingly, the game differs very little from the Nintendo version graphically, slightly blocky but generally well-drawn, spruce and handsome. Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles could have been the worst game in the world and still would have sold like hot glass - Apply, it's not the case. Instead it's a challenging, addictive arcade adventure which fans of the Turtles (and who isn't?) should be there than happy with.

Mail Bag

You're lucky to see YOB at all this month - he said he was too busy watching the World Cup to answer your letters. However, we threatened to remove the laces from his Doc Martens if he didn't, so he's given up some precious between-match hours to do his stuff. Be warned, though, he's dead grumpy about it (what's new). If you've got anything interesting to say, write to YOB'S MAILBAG, C+VG, PRIORY COURT, 30-32 FARRINGDON LANE, LONDON, EC1R 3AU. Don't forget there's a prize for the best letter of the month!

MY CRAPPY 6128

Dear YOB,
I've got an Amstrad 6128, and I think the games are rubbish. How come the Amiga 500 has got better graphics than the other computers? Last week I got a game called Kick Off and the graphics were rubbish, but when I saw the Amiga graphics they were much better. What I am trying to say is that I hope, in the future, there will be much better graphics on the Amstrad as well as the Amiga. And can you tell me what the best game is for the Amstrad? Samir Lindsaia, Crawley, W Sussex

YOB: Well, Samir, the reason the Amiga's graphics are better than the Amstrad's is that Commodore produce their computers using an old family recipe that has been passed down through the generations. I shouldn't really be telling you this, but they use a secret ingredient which is actually a special kind of moon rock and it's the constant scarcity of moon rocks on this planet that makes the Amiga so expensive. There, learn something new every day, don't you? Oh, by the way, Rainbow Islands and Chase HQ are probably the two best games on the Amstrad.

GIMME FREE TAPE

Dear YOB,
At the moment I am the proud owner of a Commodore 64 and I want to know... Why don't you stick a free tape on the front of your mag with some demos or a game? I know what you're saying, "Yes, but a tape costs a lot more", but a tape only costs 50p and if you stick it on your mag it will only cost £1.70 which is cheaper than any other mag with a freebie on a Christmas Double, Lakeside, Cardiff

YOB: We like to keep everybody happy at C+VG, so if we put cassette on the cover of C+VG for the 8 bit readers, we'd have to put disks on the cover for the 16 bit readers and various types of cartridge on the cover for the console readers! Impossible - we'd end up with a whole flamin' computer shop hanging off the front cover, and it'd cost a fortune! That's why we give away stuff to suit everyone, like Photopia, Viewers (TV), foody books and Turtles posters, stuff that no-one else in the Universe gives away. And if you thought those were good, just you wait to see what we've got lined up for the end of the year...

'NOTHER NINJA GAME

Dear YOB,
I have devised a game called Ninja Kids. The idea is to get to school on time. Level One: In this first level you have to take on a gang of medieval-wielding warlords from the enemy school. Snobgrass High it is in winter. Once you have done this you catch the school bus.

Level Two: Due to the cold weather the bus comes out and you have to take a short-cut. Here you have to take on a gang of skateboarding maddos, armed with catapults and knives. Duck them and you can win their boards.

Level Three: The gang of school bullies are waiting for you, and they are some of the toughest guys in town. You have to beat up about twenty of them before you can cross to the school gates, where the boss bully is waiting. Defeat him and you get into school on time, winning the game.

Alan Taylor, Mason, Guernsey

YOB: Blimey! An exact account of every trip to school... ah, school I never made. Ahhh, schooldays, ah? Huggledays of my life, that's for sure. 'Course I've graduated to Buxton College for Seriously Disturbed Things and Socially Unacceptable Behavioural Disorder Patients since then.

MEGA EXCITING GAME

Dear YOB,

As you said you'd give £50 worth of software for the top-rated game design, I thought I'd have a go.

Level One: A blank wall with a door in it.

Level Two: Man walks through the door and picks up a pot of paint.

Level Three: He opens the paint.

Level Four: He paints the wall black.

Level Five: He sits down to watch the paint dry.

Level Six: The paint dries and you complete the game.

David Howells, Dorset

YOB: That sounds pretty good, actually - I've got much better ideas than that. How about Super Ninja Hammand Simulator - you're a Ninja and you've got to sit on your behind for as long as possible and grow a big bunch of bottom grapes! "Pilep" of fun! Hot! Hot! Hot! I think the absolute wild on the Y-fronts of computer gaming would be a Transporting Simulator.

Stand on a cant and wet station and collect the numbers of trains. About as much fun as peeing on an electric fence. It could even be sold with a free anorak, Rucksack and thermos flask.

MUTANT HERO TURTLE COIN-OP HERO

Dear YOB,

I've just played one of the wickedest arcade games ever. What am I talking about? Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, of course!

The graphics are brilliant, very humorous, and the sound is full with loads of speech and the Turtles soundtrack blasting out. And the playability is nearly bursting out of the cabinet, loads of moves, lots of guards and end-of-level battles. If you haven't played it already go out and find it and have a go. It's wicked!

Daniel Baker, Marley, W. Midlands

PS: Just out of interest, how much would a Turtles machine cost?

YOB: Ha! We've beaten you to it! The C.V.G. lads spent several hours on a Turtles machine on Free Play at the ATEI coin-op exhibition in February and reckoned it was brilliant. These grand would get you a brand new Turtles coin-op - that's a lot of Mers Bars.

FIVE SEGA QUESTIONS

Dear YOB,

I am considering purchasing a Sega Megadrive. Before I buy one could you answer the following questions for me, it would be greatly appreciated.

1. Can you give me a more precise price for the Megadrive than around £200 when it is officially released later this year?
2. Will all the grey imported Megadrive games be released for the new English Megadrive, eg Super Genesis and Final Blot?

3. Will the game Masterball be coming out on the Mega drive? It was in the arcade in 1989 and was made by Sega - it is a very good game and I can't wait to play it again.

4. Are you still going to re-vise the grey Megadrive games in your mag or will you forget them?

5. Will people still import new games over here when the English Megadrive is released?

Anthony Apton, Beckenham, Kent

YOB: Okay, here we go. 1. Official Sega distributors Virgin/Mastertronic say that the Sega Megadrive will be on sale in Britain in September and will cost £175.00. 2. I should think so - although Super Shinobi will be called Revenge of Shinobi! Don't forget, certain software houses in Britain are also working on Megadrive games - those will appear too! 3. Who knows the secret of the Black Magic Box? 4. Of course we'll still be reviewing them - C.V.G. always reviews everything that's new and hot! 5. Yes, I should think so.

SPOT THE SPAZMO

Dear YOB,

In issue 182, a Swedish trans-venite said "Long live consoles", so I am going to Sweden to ram his console up the back end of his anatomy. Consoles are good up to a point but you get really bored with the games, especially when you are eating blood and organs to pay for the blood games.

The Amiga and ST are totally wicked, you can do loads more with them and the games start at $24.99 and go down. But with consoles, you just plug away with the lousy controller and later in the sounds, which no magazine has mentioned yet. I just sent to the psychiatrist that he took an Amiga and borrowed Sword Of Solon, Planet of the Apes and Dragon Ninja as you can't get any of these for consoles. So every con-

YOB: I really don't know why you're getting your knickers in such a twist. The ST and Amiga are very versatile machines, but programmers haven't yet started exploiting the full potential of the consoles. For every game you cite as an example of Amiga-only excellence I could come up with equally brilliant Megadrive or PC Engine games, but where would it get us? Moonbeams, that's where. So why don't you stop whinging about who's computer is the best and just get on with enjoying the games? After all, at least you don't have to sell blood and organs to buy a console!

WOTS A SUPER NINTENDO

Dear YOB,

Please, please answer my questions about the 16 bit Super Nintendo - I'm going crazy to get some proper info on this console.

Firstly, my friend has a Sega Megadrive. My mum said I could have one for my birthday in June as all my friends are also getting one. Recently, I was looking through the latest pages of your Consoles Book II, making enquiries about the Megadrive, when I saw an advert saying '16 Bit Nintendo Coming Soon'. I really liked what ever I've read about this console. It always says 'Probably won't be available for about three years'. How come they're here now then? When I asked about the release date the lady said it would be about September but she had no idea about the price. Now I'm stuck. Shall I get a Megadrive for my birthday, wait and get the 'desire' everything with microchips Nintendo in September or get the official Megadrive in September? If you wonder why I about the Nintendo, it's because of the availability of games. Also, how much will the Nintendo and games be? Please, please put my mind at rest.

Matthew "Chooooooooooooo" Stanning, Wrexham, Cheshire

PS Bring out a monthly console mag and go some Nintendo info.

YOB: The Nintendo Super Famicom is to be launched at a Japanese trade show in September, ie, as the lady you spoke to said, imports could well have them for sale here by October, along with four games including Super Mario IV (as long as the machine doesn't sell out in Japan, which is highly likely). The Japanese price will be the equivalent of about £120, but whether that will be the UK price is very doubtful - it would more than likely be about £200. With such powerful custom hardware, Nintendo will be hard pushed NOT to produce stunning games for the Super Famicom, but how and when they'll be available officially over here is a mystery from the files of Arthur C Clarke. Expect more info in The C+VG Complete Guide to Consoles Book II out in August.

THE OFFICIAL C+VG GAME

Dear YOB,

I read about the design-a-game comp in issue 100 and decided to enter, so here is C+VG - The Game.

Level One: You play Paul Ford, who has woken up late after a party. Terrorists have invaded his house and Paul must get to CHAMP Towers at all costs, before he is fired. He has only 10 seconds to defend himself and must find the keys to his Mini before the terrorists get him.

Level Two: You play Jax Rigall in this level, and must rescue Paul Gancray from the terrorists who have now invaded CHAMP Towers. You start with a gun at the bottom of the Towers and must reach the top to find Paul.

Level Three: You take control of Andrea and must try to get JR, PG and PG to do some work! All you have to do is beat them up (don't, if you fail then PACHORON C+VG's new spin won't come out).

Level Four: You take control of YOB himself, who has been called in because the terrorists have taken all the delivery vans. You climb along the telephone wires until you get to the tower-top, but your progress is hindered by terrorists, climbing along and attempting to knock you off. You can kill them by kicking them off. If you complete this level, all the team get a pay rise. Well, not! Marvin Robinson, Hollywood, Co Down YOB: You don't know how close you've come to the truth. Apart from the pay rise bit, of course.

PLAYMASTERS

Here we go with another mound of stuff, including a Turrican map and Castle Master tips. A new feature in this month's tips - arcade tips presented in comic strip form. This month we concentrate on the brilliant 'em up Final Fight. I think it's excellent - let me know what you think. If you're a player with big 'n' juicy tips (or maps, POKEs, cheats or whatever), why not send them in to me at: PLAYMASTERS, C+VG, 30-32 FARR

RINGDON LANE, LONDON, EC1R 3AU. There's a mega monthly prize of £150 worth of software for the sender of the best tips - this month won by Tony Barnett of Framp-ton Cottrell. Go for it! Next month it could be your turn!

MEGADRIVE

GHOULS 'N' GHOSTS

Eugene Simes of sunny Sydney, Australia sent in this marvellous cheat code for this marvellous arcade conversion. Switch on the machine and wait for the title to float down the screen then press UP, DOWN, LEFT and RIGHT in the joy-stick and you should hear a tune that sounds like a harp. Now you can select your starting level using one of these combinations of button presses.

BUTTONA

Second half of level one
UP and START
Level two

DOWN and START

Level three

Level four

Level five

DOWN, RIGHT and START

Level - the final boss

GOLDEN AXE

To select your starting level, go to the character select, press button B, hold the pad diagonally DOWN and LEFT and press START all at the same time and on joy-stick one. The level number will appear in the top left of the screen, and you can change it by pushing UP and DOWN on the pad. That's another Adam Tinkler tip.

PC ENGINE

HEAVY UNIT

Tai Tai of Deptford discovered how to select difficulty level and reserve strips on this blaster. On the title screen, push LEFT, 1 and SELECT together and the options screen will appear before your very eyes. Further to that, Tai also found the music test mode, which you can call up by holding down SELECT, 1, 0 and LEFT on the title screen.

CHASE HQ

Usually after the fifth chase, you start the game again. Continue until level ten where the same thing happens. Continue again and you go on to the eleventh stage where you have to catch the final boss, a huge truck! Christopher "Cool" Meier sent that one in.

NINTENDO

TOP GUN

To warp to the level of your choice disconnect both controllers and switch the machine on. Now plug in controller 1 and press START. Select one player (ret "versus") mode, and press START again. LEVEL SELECT 1 will appear and you can move up levels just by pressing the SELECT key. Adam Tinkler of Forest Hill discovered that.

TRACK AND FIELD II

Andreas Norderfeld of Stock-holm sent in these last day passwords for this smart sports game. And they are...

USA 54HLPJHNI
USSR 3M15PZJWS
FRQ 52HDPZJ2S

Andreas also says that the best way to succeed in the Hammer Throw is to release the hammer at 80 degrees with very little power.

CHAOS STRIKES BACK

If you've played this game, you'll know it's full of surprises. But did you know that there are secret passages in the ball of meringue which lead to extra challenges? Well, there are, and Matthew Parnham was the first to write in with details of finding them. To reveal Len, Champion of Good, face the mirror of tips, Warlord of Uxmal, then take one pace right, one... continued 127

CASTLE MASTER

- Don't know where to start on this mammoth Free-space game? Here's Tony Bennett of Frampton Castle to give you a guided tour of the outer regions. Take it away, Tony!
- The first thing to do before you enter the castle is have a good walk around, until you find the entrance hut. Enter and sit the cheese on the table, then return to the castle drawbridge and hurl a rock at it to lower it.
- Once inside the castle, turn immediately right and go through the Right Atrium into the South East Tower. Open the plain door on the left and enter the kitchen, then take a step forward and turn around to find a key. If you look at the information screen, you'll find that this is the key to Igor's room.
- Leave the kitchen then turn right. The next door down is the door to Igor's room, so open it with the key and kill Igor. Leave and continue around the corner of the tower until you come across a gate with some buttons beside it. Push the right button and the door opens.

- Go through the door on your left into the East Passage then walk on towards the North East Tower. Forget about the door directly in front of you and walk westward and around the corner until you get to a door on your left. Go through the door into the north passage.
- Walk all the way along to the North West Tower and open the door in front of you. There's a spin inside so get ready to pull it with a stone. The door ahead leads to the Pentacle Room but before you can enter you need the ten pentacles. Turn around and you'll find a key and ten floating pentacles on the wall. There aren't the real things, but if you click on them you can tell where to look for them.
- Go out into the corridor

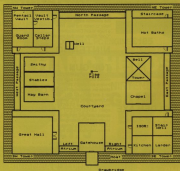

- again, turn right and follow the tower around. You can't reach the Celler Steps so get past the other button and shoot the lock off the door to the Guard Room and go inside. Go right up to the gate in the far wall and you can see what's in the Pentacle Room.
- Go back out and head down the West Passage, ignoring the door in the east wall for the moment. Crawl over the top of the obstacle at the end of the passage then walk around to the Great Hall's double doors. Open them, but be ready to shoot the spirit that's inside. Have a good poke around, because there's something in here that you need. Get it! Ok, step outside again then head right and through the door to the Left Atrium. This takes you back to the Gatehouse from where you can start exploring the Courtyard.

FURTHER POINTS OF INTEREST

- There's a key in the well, but that's not all.
- There's a wooden horse in the stables. What's made of?
- Look around in the hay in the barn.
- Sweep the flag.
- The chapel holds plenty of secrets. Check the altar, and the hole in the roof.

gate back, three gates right and forward one gate. You should now be in a secret corridor. Open the door and kill the mummies with a fireball spell. Go up the steps and Lyo's mirror is at the top. Next, a master Ninja, is also hidden. Go to Peking mirror, then go backwards into the corridor. Take two steps left and go forward into another secret corridor. Kill the rock monsters with a fireball spell and recruit Razi.

SPECTRUM RAINBOW ISLANDS

Michael Manthey reckons that when you get to the top level you should quickly move to the top left or right using warblers. When you get to the corner, keep jumping and you should become invincible and your score should shoot up!

SAIGON COMBAT UNIT

Michael Maskey also claims that the code which gets you into the second half of this crazy combat game. Remember, the password is STARLIGHT.

SHINOBI

Still having problems with this arcade conversion? Try redefining the keys as G, R, U, T and S, and the words HELLO CHERRY should appear. Redefine the keys as you want them and start the game with lots of lives. Thanks to Joseph from Texas for that.

AMIGA RAINBOW ISLANDS

To start the game with all sorts of magic bonuses, type in one of these codes (as sent in by Daniel Pemberton of East Maseley) on the title screen.

BLRBJSBJ
Fast feet
RJSBJSR

Double randoms
SSSLLRRS
Fast randoms
SJBUBJRS
Fast hero
LJLSLBS
Second fast
LBSJRWL

When you have typed in a code, slow a credit and a red pet should appear in the corner of the screen.

To enter the secret room you need to collect all the diamonds in the right order, which if you ever listened to your Physics teacher, you would know is RED, ORANGE, YELLOW, GREEN, BLUE, INDIGO, VIOLET (the colours of the rainbow, see?). A door will appear in the guardian's lair leading to a room full of permanent magic potions.

CABAL

Daniel Pemberton also sent in the cheat mode for Ocean's coin-up conversion. During the game, type SCHLICK and the border should flash. Now press F2 and as if by magic, you'll finish the level.

AMSTRAD

AMC

Igor of Trinity sent that the password that gets you into the second half of this game is BAGOBAN. So now you know.

C64

SHORT CIRCUIT

"No disassembly!" as Number Five would say, but that's exactly what Michael Diani of Leitchworth did to this game's code. To get straight onto the second level, wait for the menu to appear then press F7 and F3 at the same time, then release them both and press just F7 again. If you get caught and deactivated, just repeat the cheat to continue.

IMPOSSA- MOLE

This cheat for the C64 version comes from Simon Kettle of Liverpool. To stop any baddies, keep your finger on space (the P key). You should find that some of them stop moving. Keep pressing it until it stops the ones you want then kill them. This also works on the end of level bosses.

SEGA

PSYCHO FOX

At the end of level 1-3 jump on all the springs until you get to the very top spring. Keep bouncing and when you are about to come down on that spring, release the coin and it should make a crack. Do this three times and a warp should open up. Jump in and walk as far as the pit. Jump on the pit, press down on the joystick and you'll appear in the next level.

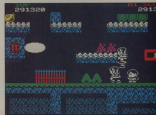

pear in world of Thanks to James May of Birmingham for that gem.

MY HERO

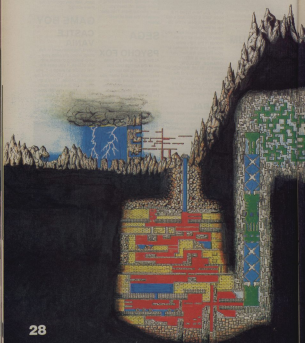

Philip Hightest of Slaverage reckons you can get an extra life in this game by punching the Kicker Thrower in the back. Not very sporting, but there you go.

GAME BOY CASTLE VANIA

David Robinson sent in this cheat which provides you with lots of lives. If you pass the first candle on stage 1-1, you should find a 1-UP (and the eleventh candle). There's another 1-UP in a secret room which is above the fifth rope. Get both of these 1-UPs then kill yourself. You will now be able to keep repeating this method, earning yourself one extra life each time.

The world of

of Turrican

HAGAR. The strongest, but slowest. Keep punching and let enemies come to you. Cluster them into a group and beat them into one another. Avoid using weapons on fast opponents.

GUY. Extremely fast, but lacks attack power. Keep enemies confused by constantly moving around the arena. Use the flying knee, punch, shoulder charge combination for devastating attacks.

CODY. Good at counter with both strength and speed. Keep enemies pinned down with punches, then throw them against the screen. Take out the bigger guys with knee kicks. Repeat with a smile.

Destroy objects to reveal special items. Food restores energy, while collecting items such as radios and jets increases your score. Finally, use weapons to keep the enemies on the ground.

When GAMES appears, drain his energy with area kicks or head butts. While GAMES is sitting on the wall, attack the smaller thugs, but be prepared to dodge him when he does his flying kicks.

Never get in front of BODOM when he's armed with swords. Move above or below him, grab him and either knee kick or head butt to stun him. Try and grab him as soon as he stands. If he charges, kick him down and grab him.

Fight BOLE with the same tactics as Bodom, but use punches instead of grab attacks. Finish with a throw and use the spare seconds to replenish your health. Try and stay close when he draws his gun - he only shoots when he's far away. Finish him off with knee kicks.

Avoid using grab attacks against ROLETO. He attacks with a stick, so kick to keep him at bay. If he misses you, you have several seconds to attack. If he tries a flying kick, defend with a death blow. When he throws grenades, dodge them and use grab attacks.

The boss - CROSS. BOY. He fires his weapon if you walk in front of him, so keep moving and use weak attacks. It's tricky to grab him, so stick to punches and kicks. Throwing weapons at him just makes him off-balance. Cross and Cup can defeat crossbow bolts fired horizontally, not diagonally.

Stay at the bottom of the screen and when ADRIAN runs in, use your grab attacks twice. After that he grabs you, so avoid getting too close. When he charges you must punch in his direction.

ORIENTAL GAMES

BY MICROSTYLE

Think you've got what it takes to be a master of Martial Arts? This is the game that will test the best 'em up skills of a league of 50 to sixteen people in a competition comprising three different disciplines.

The Kung Fu event is the classical, centuries-old art of unarmed combat which you'll doubtless be familiar with. Kyo-Ryu-Hin-Ku, on the other hand, is a relatively new freestyle event, the rules of which allow the participants to use a selection of punches, kicks and acrobatic manoeuvres from various disciplines. The last event is Randy, in which the two participants face off armed with large poles.

The knockout tournament is played against either human or computer opponents, and if you are prepared to watch other competitors' matches you can learn their strategies and plan your moves accordingly. For this purpose, there is a joystick editor built into the game, which allows you to access up to four movements, say, a punch, a high kick, a jump then a backflip, by pushing the joystick in a specified direction.

UPDATE

An Amiga version is due out at the end of July, which should be pretty similar to the ST version reviewed here. An Atari and Spectrum version are appearing at the end of June which will have an extra event, Sumo Wrestling, but no joystick editor. Mystifyingly, there are no plans for a C64 version at the moment.

ST
£24.99

Martial arts games are many and various on all machines, but there aren't many that put three different beat 'em ups in one package, and that's where Oriental Games' real strength lies. No-one could claim the three games are stunning beat 'em ups, but they're well up to scratch and could more than likely hold their own as individual products. The graphics throughout are very good and the excellent sampled squeals of pain are effective. The computer is a challenging opponent in all three disciplines and at all three skill levels, but playing against a friend is more fun, especially if you've expertly used the joystick editor to put together a devastating "secret weapon" move. Even if you don't fancy yourself as the next Bruce Lee, this value for money package is the perfect way to let off steam after a hard day at the office (pleasantry, bicycle shop, whatever).

RAILROAD

TYCOON

BY MICROPROSE

Ever wondered what it was like in the early days of the steam engine, trying your eggs on the coal shovels, riding on the footplate with the smell of oil and grease up your nose? Wonder no more: Railroad Tycoon has arrived on Platform 1.

You're cast as an ambitious entrepreneur with a budget of one million dollars. Your only aim in life is to build it wiser in the railroad and make a vast of cash. To do so you'll have to use your brains and their specialist carriages to take resources like oil, coal and petrol to the right factories, and transport mail and passengers from town to town.

There are four different territories to choose from - England, East America, West America and Europe - and in all of them you deal with evil railroad entrepreneurs. Pull-down menus allow you to organize your finances, play a visit to the stockbroker, operate signals, build trains, compete with your rivals and create the most profitable routes. You can even build factories or pull up restaurants and post offices at your local stations, if you want to make a bit of extra cash.

A financial report is shown up at the end of each year. If your investors (they're the guys who put up the cash in the first place) are pleased, you're allowed to carry on. If not, it's back to playing with your train set.

C+VG HIT!

UPDATE

There's just too much detail squeezed into Railroad Tycoon to fit it into an 8-bit processor, but Amiga and ST versions are in the pipeline. Gameplay, sound and graphics should be exactly the same.

PC

C34.99

With its sheer complexity, vast array of options and immense scope for hours and hours of play, Railroad Tycoon is one of the clearest simulations you've ever likely to see - a bit like Sim City with loads of extras thrown in. Once you've got the hang of them, the maps and menus are easy to use, building is incredibly easy and the whole package is distinguished by masses of authentic detail: you can lay double or single track, be your own signaller, or dabble in the stock market with bonds and shares. All the maps are geographically accurate so you can build a network of factories round your home town and watch the population explode. Better still, the resource map is different every time you play so no two games can ever be the same - even if you lay your track in exactly the same place. With that much scope for unique design and development it will be months before you run out of puff. Graphically, Tycoon may not be much to look at (though there are some very good animated building sequences) but what it lacks in glamour it certainly makes up for in generosity, and if you've got a sound board, the effects are something special! If you ever wanted to be an engine driver, buy it.

BY IMAGE WORKS

ST
£24.99

There is only one word to sum up Theme Park Mystery - surreal! I mean, where else can you jump on a monorail and, in the process, transform into a Dark Age barbarian, or a suitably kitted-out spaceman? And then there's the dream sequence, which appears whenever you take a sip of Sleep potion - the screen switches to a view of a chessboard; touching the chess-pieces makes them turn into chequered boxes, and throwing kays at the board reveals items - be careful though, as some of the pieces turn into snakes! Weird. Graphically, Theme Park Mystery is of very high quality, with some charming touches such as the floating pyramid which transforms your character in the monorail, and the graphics are backed up by equally impressive sound effects. The only thing is, it's such a strange concept that you could end up hanging yourself from the nearest oak beam in frustration! And what a mess Image Works have decided to give out any instructions or even clues in the packaging! As long as you remember that Theme Park Mystery is probably the strangest game you will have played so far, you should have no qualms about sticking it in your drive and playing for quite some time.

PAUL RAND

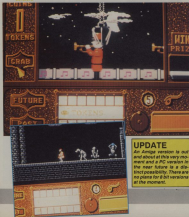

Park, had been closed down for some time. Stepping into the tuffar, he stuck a token into one of the machines and began to play...

This mysterious theme park consists of four levels, with names as weird as the places they belong to, places such as Futurland and Time-labyrinth. The game begins in a small arcade, where you must win enough tokens to buy a monorail ticket, allowing you to enter the main game. And once you're there, well... don't ask me! I wasn't given any instructions either!

Oh I do like to be beside the seaside! Especially if there's a fairground there.

That's what the star of Theme Park Mystery thought when he inherited this strange collection of rides, shows and coin-operated games which, for reasons unbeknownst to

PROJECTYLE

BY ELECTRONIC ARTS

Sports of the future won't be played on boring old surfaces like grass - each team will be able to choose their own playing surface according to their strengths.

Projectyle features eight such teams, each with their own pitch - these range from the ridiculously fast (owned by the Manic Moons) to the slow, crusty, spotted surface used by the Eldritch Cats. Each pitch is divided up into five areas: there's a central zone with no goalmouths, three defence zones and a 'forward' zone where there are three goalmouths and everyone has an equal chance of scoring.

The objective, obviously, is to score as many goals as possible within the three-set time limit. But here's the novel twist: unlike most sports, Projectyle features three teams competing for the ball (the projectyle) at the same time. The team scoring most receives 3 points, the second team 2, and the third gets one.

UPDATE

The Amiga version should be released at the same time for the same price; a PC version 'may' be on the cards, but it's not likely. No other versions are planned.

ST

Projectyle's presentation is probably the most polished you'll find in any future sport. Apart from the full league and cup system (with up to eight human players taking part) and a overload of silly, there's a host of definable player personalities and the ability to train and display team members in any position. All eight pitch designs are brilliant, from a bubbling chocolate and lava pitch - they're colourful, imaginative and feature smooth 4-way parallax scrolling. In-game presentation features include an optional action replay sequence and a practice mode (you can switch off computer intelligence). As if that wasn't enough, there's also a leading scorer table (the gameplay itself is fast and furious - a bit like air hockey played on five pitches instead of one. You might think at first that it's all mindless rushing around after the projectyle, but it only takes a few games to appreciate the strategic elements. This is a beautifully designed, colourful and extremely fast future sport - one that's going to take some beating.

For ten years the Biological Survey Ship Jane Seymour has been floating dead in space, and now the Federation have dispatched you to salvage the derelict. Usually space salvage is easy, but this job's going to be pretty tricky. According to the report, radiation from a Moon Moon star has long since driven the crew insane, and the ship's ecological samples have escaped from their containers.

In their deranged state, both the crew members and the animals are less than friendly, making the first order of business finding a weapon of some description. These range from sappers (not very effective) to flame throwers and particle plasmas, which, as well killing off monsters, can often destroy the floor they're standing on! Battles are fought in real time, and aiming is done manually with a wobbly gun sight, the better the gun the less wobbly the sight and the less time it takes to reload after each shot.

You have numerous pockets to fill and as well as having weapons to collect, there are keyboards, torches, grenades and other sundries. Also, look out for robots, which you can recruit and program for any function, as long as you've found the right programming cartridges.

What you really need, though, are fluids. To fix the ship's failing systems they have to be treated with coolant and lubricant liquids, so you either need to find some fluids, or program a robot to make some, then fill them up at a robotic dispenser.

Once Jane Seymour's lights are fully lubricated, she heads for home and you have to start the game again on the host of the handy in-reels, which has different deck layouts and even nastier monsters lying in wait.

UPDATE

Jane Seymour wasn't too happy about it, but I'm afraid, but work is progressing again on an ST version which should be out very soon indeed.

C+VG HIT!

AMIGA

These loan-driven 3D adventures have become more and more popular of late, and the standard has been going up as well. While ISS Jane Seymour is similar to Pandora's Kinship in subject matter, it's a more compact game, which drastically means that, though the playfield is smaller, you don't have to do as much wandering about to find game action. The elements of the ship are nicely designed and animated, but unfortunately most of them look caddy and cartoony, instead of being menacing and realistic as Dungeon Master is. That's the only niggle worth mentioning though, and on the whole, ISS is an excellent adventure.

There are a ton of options for handling objects, programming robots, etc. etc, but the loan system ropes with them all admirably, making the game very easy to get into. Playing through 3D packed levels is going to be a real burning-the-midnight-oil job, so if you've a few weeks to spare and a coffee machine next to your computer this is a definite must buy.

DEFENDERS OF THE EARTH

BY ENIGMA
VARIATIONS

Flash Gordon's been around a bit, hasn't he? From 30s Saturday morning matinee to 60s film, to 90s cartoon series and now to computer. Along with the rest of his new team, the Defenders Of The Earth, he's up against... who else - the evil Ming The Merciless, who has moved from Mongo to Earth in a bid to wreak havoc and become ruler of the world! This time he's kidnapped the young Defenders, imprisoning them in his fortress in an attempt to force Flash, The Phantom, Lothar and Mandrake to give up their never-ending battle for justice and peace and let Ming become dictator of Earth. Of course, that's unthinkable so, after a bit of planning, the Defenders set out to rescue the kids. Ray pistol in hand, Flash, has to leg it around Ming's horizontally scrolling hideout and take out the various badies. When in need of a little assistance, you can call on Dynam, the Defenders' computer, to beam down another member of the team. Each member of the team has special abilities, essential to the mission's success (for example, Phantom can kick down heavy oak doors). Even the team mascot, Zuffy, has a use although he sometimes makes mistakes and arouses the attention of huge guardian robots, including Ming's enormous metallic arch-enemy, Octool.

UPDATE

Woah, Defenders beat Flash and Co are appearing now on an ST, C64, Spectrum and Amstrad near you, at prices of £29.99 (ST) and £29.99 (all others).

AMIGA
£19.95

When I first heard that there was to be a game based on what has to be my favourite cartoon series of this year, I expected it to be a poorly-animated shooter, relying on only the Space F style. Now it's here and, yes it's a shoot 'em up, but, to my surprise, quite a good one. Okay, so it's not outstanding, and I suppose the license does go some way to adding interest, but Defenders Of The Earth has a lot of good points. The opening title card, for instance, is extremely close to the TV counterpart, and the opening speech of Flash, inviting you to join in the mission, adds atmosphere. The game itself is very difficult, especially when you're only got the rubbishy pistol which you begin with (more weapons are available later), but justice reaps its own rewards and you'll find yourself getting deeper into Ming's domain with every attempt. Defenders Of The Earth isn't an essential purchase, but if you're looking for a challenging battle with a bit more besides, it's well worth having a look at.

▲ ANDEED! Brian plummeted down a well

PROPHECY 1

▼ Sleek up an magic weapons at the Borg's Arsenal

▼ This boss doesn't look pleased to see you

BY WIRED

Brian was a happy-go-lucky sort of Viking child living in a typical Viking village. When his master said "Go and get some herbs from the forest," he did it with a whistle in his throat and a smile on his face.

Little did he know that whilst he was away watching bunny rabbits gambol and frolic, his whole village was razed to the ground by a war-daring whirlwind. His family and friends were all whisked off to Valhalla where Loki (Mr Bad Guy) was feeding them pie and food.

In tears, he saw a vision of Odin, who reassured him that all was not lost. An oracle prophesied that Brian would rescue his chums and give that terrible trickster, Loki, a good biffing.

First, though, he's got to rid the land of all evil. There are shades and secret passages and hidden gems to help him, but the one thing Brian's relying on most is you.

UPDATE

An Amiga version is due for simultaneous release, with a PC version to follow eventually. An i-386 Prophecy is a possibility, but only once the game has been released on consoles in America.

ST

£24.99

There are only a couple of things wrong with Prophecy 1: the main character's movement is a tad too slow and there's a bit too much disk-swinging. It plays like a hybrid of Wonderboy and Super Mario Bros without quite achieving the playability of either. Despite these drawbacks, it's a very enjoyable game - the graphics are colourful with some great water touches and the sound is jolly enough. There's plenty of variety in the gameplay to keep you hooked; it's very much an old-style arcade adventure, with the emphasis squarely on fun. The difficulty level is about right, too - the first stage is a pretty simple affair with some annoying enemies; but after that things get really tough - and there's a handy password system to fend off boredom. The best part, though, is that you can play the same level again and again and still discover secrets you missed the last time. With that kind of hidden depth and plenty of lands to explore, it'll be a long time before you get bored.

WIN LOADS OF TURTLES GOODIES

Bit of a Turtles fan? Then listen up, because this comp's for you. Jaz recently went to America and brought back with him a veritable mound of Turtles goodies - Turtles figures, a cuddly Turtle, book of the film, enormous poster mag, comics - even Turtles-breakfast cereal and bubblegum!! At first he didn't really want to give it all away, but now, thanks to a vice and some plums, he's decided to go completely crazy and hand it over. All you've got to do is answer the following questions. The person who sends in the funniest answers will win all the Turtles stuff. It's as simple as that...

THE QUESTIONS

1. What's green and goes up and down?
2. What's green and slimy and slides down your leg?
3. What's small and green and climbs ladders?

Write your hilarity on the back of a postcard and send it off to: BOGEYS ARE GREEN VIOLETS ARE BLUE MY PANTS ARE OLD AND THEY SMELL OF POO COMP, C-VO, PRIORY COURT, 86-82 FARRINGTON LANE, LONDON, ECH8 3AU. The closing date is August 1st - after that day we'll read all the entries, and the one which makes us wet our knicks with laughter (or is the funniest) wins all the Turtles stuff.

ROTOX

BY US GOLD

Wanna know how to make a robot? Take one machine component, blow him to bits on the surface of Titan and put him first class to a mad German scientist.

That's exactly what happened to J. Karsinski in the 22nd century: a mass of metal and steel, he was reassembled as the Rotox (the world Xenoglobe, Mark I - ROTOX I). Of course, no one checks a thing like that at the general public; he has to be tested first. This involves plunking out tin whistles on the Solar Exploration Company's training complex beyond the orbit of Neptune, where the landscape and all its components rotate around him at high speed.

If he survives ten minutes, back with one section jam-packed with aliens and deadly machines, he'll serve a useful role in society. If not, he'll end his life as a hundred robotic cans.

UPDATE

A PC version supporting CGA, EGA and VGA will have music and effects compatible with Ad Lib and Roland sound boards; it's due in June. No other versions are planned.

AMIGA

This is a very unusual combination of tricky platform action and funny blasting which you don't really take to at first. The initial level feels quite easy (apart from some wobbly spinning platform) and the aliens tend to gang rather than behave intelligently. Get to the second level and it all changes! The aliens become a tad meaner and some of the platform traps are really devious - from then on, you're just got to beat the next stage... The new Rotox system plays like the arcade game, Assault, but well-designed though sometimes garish, spinning levels transform an average blaster into a very often engaging one. Add to this some neat effects and great music and you've got a game well worth watching out for.

ULTIMA V

BY ORIGIN

Life is dull in the real world

It's always the same, isn't it? There you are, sitting watching the telly, and some Lord from another dimension turns up, tells you to fix kingdom to defeat another enemy race. Boreish.

That's what happens in the latest chapter of the Ultima story as you, in the role of Avatar, take on the might of the gargoyles which are crawling the land of Britannia town by town. Thankfully you aren't alone in your quest - with you are three friends from previous parleys to Lord British's country and, being the Avatar (the embodiment of all that is wholesome and good), you also have access to a range of spells. And, of course, there's the Orb Of The Moons, a small stone which allows communication with the help of the moon's rays. As with all the best kingdoms, there are a upon your world. Five seasons have passed since your triumphant homecoming from Britannia.

Step inside and meet the gypsy

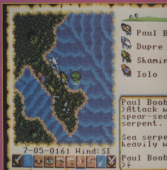

Answer the questions truthfully to set up your character

A lonely stroll along an unfamiliar forest path brings you upon a curious gypsy wagon. Its exotic colors gleamed in the summer shade.

"You are a bloody hunter, aren't you? You are an alleged murderer. After his capture, they don't come to believe him innocent. But they do sacrifice the stable boy for the belief, or do they? More than that to return him as promised?"

▲ The ultimate band scores face-to-face with a deadly sea serpent!

load of items in which you can stock up on supplies and weapons, knock back a few hearty ales at the local boozery and chat to the inhabitants, many of whom have vital information concerning your assigned task. And it's a good idea to listen to them, because in Britannia, it's not always the best policy to go charging in blind with sword unsheathed!

UPDATE

Optimaphiles, mark September 1st in your diary, because that's when the ST, Amiga and C64 versions of Ultima VI will be appearing on the shelves.

▼ A bolt of lightning opens the gate to Britannia

PC

£34.99

It's hardly surprising considering the time it's taken to arrive, but Ultima VI is the biggest, most involved game in the series. The quest may not seem at first to be too difficult but soon the adventure develops to such an extent that, if you haven't got amazing powers of concentration, you'll become lost in the various sub-quests. As ever, the game is displayed using a bird-eye view which works extremely well on a colour system but there is so much detail on the screen that playing on a Hercules machine quickly causes severe eye strain. The control system is extremely simple to operate, with only two main icons and a cursor to control your entire destiny, and with the amount of fighting needed to vanquish the hordes of creatures inhabiting Britannia, you'll be more than pleased to learn that it only takes a couple of keypresses to unleash a blow to the enemy. If you haven't got a reasonably fast colour PC with a hard drive, forget it - Ultima VI takes up around 4 megabytes of disk space so you spend a lot of time swapping disks. But if you've got a decent system and enjoy large, demanding RPGs, this is one which I'd recommend you pick up without delay.

No change at the top of the chart - Fantasy World Dizzy continues to rule the roost with Paperboy right behind it. Klxx's new release, the rather weak Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom, makes a surprisingly dramatic entrance, stealing third position from Rock Star. Top full price title is Op Thunderbolt, which has just reached the C64.

The long-awaited Retailer finally rolls out of the fanger and goes ballistic. Straight to number one for the nifty flight sim. It's closely followed by the raft, but realists, Italia 1990.

PG'S TIP FOR THE TOP

MIDWINTER: At time of writing, Rainbird still haven't released the Amiga version of this megagame, but I'm assured that it will be out when you read this, so expect Retailer to be at number two in next month's chart.

After all that waiting, Operation Thunderbolt turned out to be a bit of a disappointment, but it was still popular enough to take Fantasy World down a peg or two. The unworthy Paperboy stays at the top of the chart for another month.

PG'S TIP FOR THE TOP

ESCAPE FROM SINGE'S CASTLE: A great escapee from Escape which is well worth a place in the top ten.

FIVE-A-SIDE FOOTBALL

SILVERBIRD

Just for a change, here's a football game that doesn't feature all the World Cup teams or give astrophysical profiles of the Cameroon First XI. This is just good, old, played-in sports centres by building overweight businessmen Five-A-Side. Well, calling it "good" is perhaps a bit of an overstatement, this being one of the weakest of the current crowd of soccer sims. The Spectrum version starts off with some crisp sampled speech, but from there it's all downhill. The game is slowville, the speed-from-above players look like they're teed in the middle as they run around, and tackling the opposing team can sometimes get them very confused, causing them to run backwards and forwards on the spot. Yuck.

SPECTRUM £2.99

It takes more than sampled speech to save this gloriously game of football. Try Match Day instead.

OVERALL 35%

AMSTRAD £2.99

More confused, but in all other respects, similar to the Spectrum version and equally poor. Something of an own goal for Silverbird, unfortunately.

OVERALL 37%

ESCAPE FROM SINGE'S CASTLE

INCORE

This Incore release puts you in the chain mail of Link the Dating, on a quest to enter the castle of the despotic Lizard King and 'do him over, good and proper-like'. This means fighting his way through eight separate parts of the castle, each one being a different subgame. Some sections are puzzles, others are more action-oriented, but, as in the later video chain-ops, all of them require you to learn a sequence of moves before they let you pass. However, unlike the first Dragon's Lair game, there's rather more to playing Singe's Castle than pushing the joystick in exactly the right direction at exactly the right moment, so it's much more fun. The nice graphics and sound add their two-pennorth to the enjoyment too.

SPECTRUM £2.99

Less clever than the Amstrad version and the games come in a different order. Pretty good stuff.

OVERALL 80%

AMSTRAD £2.99

Smart and playable translation of the laser-disc coin-op. Much more fun than Dragon's Lair.

YOGI'S GREAT ESCAPE

HI TEC

The famed cartoon bear is in a whole mess of trouble. Ranger Smith has just been told he has to close down Jellystone Park and send all the animals to new homes in the local zoo. Free spirit that he is, Yogi plans to escape with his pal Boo-Boo and start a new life in New York where he's heard (and some young girls) can earn a lot of money. To escape from each of the six sections, Yogi has to jump across a landscape of cunningly-positioned platforms, sliding ladders and collecting food and the odd poker-mach basket for bonus points. It sounds like a million other games, I know, but Yogi's Great Escape is gifted with excellent graphics and very addictive - even mentally stimulating - gameplay which keeps you hooked for quite some time.

SPECTRUM £2.99

Smarter than the average horizontally-scrolling platform game.

BLINKY'S SCARY SCHOOL ZEPPELIN

It's been a whole century since Fred (and) McTeavish kicked all the ghosts out of Drumbachie Castle, but now it's time for the spooks to strike back. Blinky, ace pupil at the school for spectres, has been sent on a mission to scare the pants off the castle's owner, Hamish McTeavish. To do that he has to wander through the halls, leap around platforms and pick up magic bits to dump in a cauldron. In most respects Blinky's is like so many other budget arcade adventures, but it has really jolly graphics and the gameplay shows a few sparks of ingenuity, and these give it the edge over most games of this ilk. Recommended.

ARCADE FRUIT MACHINE ZEPPELIN

Spend three quid and save a fortune: 1 game that's the idea behind this board simulation which provides everything a fruit addict could possibly want (except perhaps an endorsement from Gamblers Anonymous). Games, nudges, skill stops, holds, bonus holds, feature holds, feature repeat, reverse and forward starts - they're all here. All those features and the packed display make it a staggeringly tricky game for the novice to follow, but even old timers will doubtless be in their element.

FRUIT MACHINE 2 CODE MASTERS

What? Another fruit machine game? Is this the start of a budget trend? Like Zeppelin's effort, this seems to have all the features of the most advanced models, some of which, like the Mega Trek, the Turbo-Ball, the Winner Spinner and the Coin Box Super-Dominator are quite bizarre. The program uses several different screens for the different features so the display isn't as cramped as that of the Zeppelin game. The control keys are more obvious, too, so FMI is, on the whole, the less confusing of the two. If you need to be warned off the gambling

SPIDER-TRONIC SMASH 16

Scared of spiders? Scare them! This particular one is on a mission to link together the fabric of the universe, by placing coloured tiles over the holes in space, and if that weren't hard enough, he's being harassed by a host of coloured balls! Dotted around the playing area are anti-grav tiles which allow little old Inky to travel between the different floors, and, once you've filled the gaps, it's onto the next, more hazardous stage. What looks at first to be a pretty dull puzzle game is, in fact, an addictive romp with charming graphics and soothing sound. The gameplay isn't exactly fast and frenetic, but it is still demanding enough to make you want to cry when one of the balls crashes into your fast spider just as you're about to end in the final cut-out. Great value.

HEAD OVER HEELS HIT SQUAD

The wacky baddy Black-Heels has captured Mr Head and his Heels and imprisoned them in his solar system which consists of five planets. You have to liberate each planet before taking on the head guy and beating his ass into the ground. Only snag is, Head and Heels have been split up and, at Head is only good at jumping and Heels is pretty hot off the mark when it comes to covering ground, you're going to have to get the pair together again before things can really happen. And in the meantime, you've got to deal with such hazards as remote-controlled Pinco Charles Danks, electrified toasters and other

SLAP FIGHT HIT SQUAD

Hands up all you lot who thought Drac was the sole electronic talking box from Blake's Seven. Wrong! Well, technically you're absolutely right, but not in this case. Drac is, in fact, an enemy planet which you, in your Slap Fighter, must penetrate and crush into little pieces, before the arrival, stationed there assemble and launch an all-out assault on Mother Earth. Cheers! And with only a measly little jet-slasher of a gun to fight with, you're gonna wish you ate four Speedy Whizz this morning! But don't get too worried, as you can collect extra weapons too, and escape along the way - eh? Well, what can one say about this game that hasn't been said before - virtually scrolling, weapon collecting, and all level guardian blasting mindless shoot 'em up action? Not a lot really, except that this one's better than a lot which you'll see at budget price, with pretty spaceships

DALEY THOMPSON'S SUPERTEST

The old Lucasfilm man himself has had three games made about him. This is the second in the series, which continues on from the classic physics smasher, Daley Thompson's Decathlon, with a further eight events to squeeze you, tease you and break your wrist in unpleasant places. Events are many and varied, and include Pistol Shooting which entails shooting at spinning targets to gain a qualifying score, springboard diving, cycling and other such lively things. Daley gets three chances to qualify in each event - if he fails all three, he's out and must begin from the beginning. SuperTest doesn't even hold the magic which the original Decathlon game possessed, but having said that it's a much slicker title, with more events, better graphics and not nearly so much irritating physics waggling to be done. It's a smashing game and, for £2.99, you'd be a bit of a dribble to miss it.

PROTECTOR 16-BLITZ

Put two choppers together and what do you get? No, not a biological three-back, but a hail of speed, power and shooting skill way out in the desert. Two helicopters are attempting to blow each others' bases to smithereens, by picking up the parts to make an atom bomb then dropping the completed explosive device on the opponent's volcano hell-pad. The first to complete the mission wins - that's all there is to it. Unfortunately, what's there isn't worth getting on, never mind taking out nearly a liver. Protector is an atrocious Chopchop derivative, comprising of stinky graphics, sub-standard sound, and gameplay so shallow you couldn't fit an egg-soup with it. If you're looking for a decent budget buy this month, look to Spiderbane.

FRED UBI SOFT

Yes brave knight, Sir Fred, hath had his damnest gathered by yon feckish dwarf, Uffmoot, and been reduced to tery stature by said villain's magic. Now he seeks to recover his lost maiden as well as his lost inches by trinking through 50 different levels, slaying chasely, stone-throwing gnomes, shambling ghroves, etc, etc, with knives and his trusty sword. Ubi Soft have really gone to town with the graphics on this game, with cartoon-like animation on the characters and extremely pretty background graphics, and the sound isn't half bad either. But, downer number one is the unnecessary three-level playfield that lets you move into and out of the screen to avoid obstacles but overcomplicates the controls. Downer number two is the way the levels come in sets of three, so that if you die on stage three, you get sent right back to stage one. Alas!

DYNASTY WARS US GOLD

Fight off the clans of ancient Japan in the 8 bit conversions of the Capcom coin-up. There's a choice of four warriors to play, and after selecting whichever has the right combination of physical and magical strength, mount up and charge into oncoming hordes of foot soldiers, archers and cavalry. The Spectrum and Amstrad conversions are nicely done, though the visible playing area is quite small and the detailed sprites are quite difficult to make out against the black-coloured ground. The C64 version looks like it's played in a nightmare, though, with dull grey warriors rampaging about a mud-brown battlefield. For some reason, the original gameplay isn't instantly appealing, so unless you loved Dynasty Wars in the arcades this isn't really worth scouring the shelves for.

INTERNATIONAL 3D TENNIS PALACE

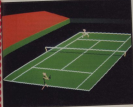

Take to some of the most famous tennis courts in the world in the Amiga version of Palace's excellent and unusual tennis simulation. FINAL COMMAND UBI SOFT

What's this? Dead bodies all over the bridge of the Starship Command? Control consoles peppered with laser fire? It seems one of the Command's driver was working for the evil Hargrams, and it's up to you to find out who, why, when and where in this completely mouse-driven space adventure. The screen shows a picture of your location (which looks digitised then touched up) and you can pick up or examine objects just by moving your pointer over them and clicking. This works pretty well, but the locations of certain objects is not at all obvious and the only way to find an essential teleport pass is to sweep the pointer about an apparently empty floor until it changes into an information can. There are also some uncomfortably tedious deaths which doesn't make for optimum enjoyment either.

BLOODWYCH MIRRORSOFT

Restore the Crystals of Trowen and save the universe from eternal damnation in the Spectrum version of this mighty one or two player RPG. Choose four champions from a selection of 180 choices, warriors and wizards, then take them through the many levels of Trowen, solving puzzles, hunting down boys and magic items, and slaying hordes of the vile Zerkons. The icon command system handles interaction between characters, object manipulation, fighting and spell casting and though the two split screens leave the menus crammed together, selecting items is surprisingly easy. The cassette version is a bit of a fiddle, what with saving out Character files, etc, but getting going on the disk version is a breeze.

fan of the arcade game you may well be disappointed with this conversion. While the gameplay isn't too bad it's far from addictive, and the graphics are pretty yucky. The game has the distinction of being compatible with light guns and Commodore and Neos mice, if that's any consolation.

What do you do when you're one of a multitude of companies who possess the rights to produce a footy game based on one of a number of teams, competitions and the like at around World Cup time, and you really want to do well in the sales figures? Don't buy just one licence, get your hands on two of the title (sighers).

That's what Virgin have done with this 'un, for, as well as the game being a conversion of the addictive coin-op soccer game, they're also slapping the Italia '90 stick man onto the box lid, and calling it World Cup Soccer - Italia '90. Displayed in the now familiar bird's eye view format, you take control of seven players from one of four countries, and must battle through the rounds to, hopefully, lift that cup and proclaim yourself champion of the footballing world. There isn't a full-time whistle; instead, the game plays right through until the finish, but there's a referee who will

First impressions of World Cup Soccer - Italia '90 were of disappointment - with its lushness down and a reduction in on-screen players. It seemed that the game wouldn't be able to compete with other soccer titles on the market. But after playing for a while, you begin to realise that it isn't supposed to be a simulation at all, but an out-and-out arcade kickabout. As is usually the case with any football game, Italia '90 is more enjoyable when played against a human opponent because, after a relatively short time, you can predict exactly what the computer is going to do. Graphics are great, with some really well animated players and spectators behind the goal, stars when you're in a shooting position, and although the control method, which involves pressing the fire button to take control of the player nearest the ball, is initially irritating you soon get used to it. World Cup Soccer - Italia '90 doesn't have a lot of depth of gameplay, but if arcade football is your thing, get your pixels on this.

The arena-fair spectacle of the future won't be fading in to jet-powered football or particle tennis. In 2038 the only competition worth telecasting is the Megacorp Industries Ground Defense Games.

Entrants get a choice of five ships to fly in the contest, each of which has different speed, acceleration and manoeuvrability statistics. However, after each round the referees award outstanding pilots enhancements to upgrade their ships' flight performance.

The games consist of 50 rounds, played in five different 3D arenas. The object of the game is to use your ship's armament to defend a set of ground installations from robot attack ships which are being released from generators. The attack ships try to deactivate your installations by landing on top of them and draining them of energy, whereupon they turn into homicidal heat-seeking mutants. Blast all the enemy drones and their generators before you lose all your installations and you progress to the next round.

There are six types of deadly drone ships, each with their own offensive characteristics. They include Satchmores (which hold us right for your installations and try to deactivate them), Bombers (which, not surprisingly, try bombing) and Lungers (which explode into clouds of shrapnel when shot). If you're lucky, though, a third drone will leave behind a pick-up pod, to equip your ship with located shield or weapon power, up to three spawning defence pods, a set of turbo boosters or double shots.

UPDATE

It and Amiga versions of ThunderStrike will be out and about by the end of June, both priced £24.99. Watch out for the update next issue.

PC
£29.99

This is one game I've been looking forward to for a while, and the wait has been well worth it. It's basically a pretty simple game - like a 3D version of Defender - but it's very, very playable and the speedy vector graphics make playing it a fascinating experience. Initially, viewing the action from a terrain-hugging 'omni-cameral' makes it quite difficult to gauge where pods and ships are meant to be, but everything falls into place after only a few minutes of experimental swooping about and blasting. Control is by mouse or keyboard, and both are fine, though the heavy-handed analog you might find it easy to use if you turn the mouse sensitivity down a notch or two. The feeling of zooming over hills and dale is marvellous and if you're lucky enough to have a VGA card plugged in the scenery is spectacularly colourful, as you can see from the screenshots. In EGA mode the colours are less subtle, of course, but this doesn't affect the gameplay at all, and for that, here's a game you don't need a superfast machine to play. ThunderStrike costs perfectly. Available even on an old Mac PC.

C+VG HIT!

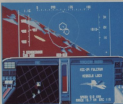

UPDATE

With a bit of luck, Amiga F-19 should be out next month, priced £79.99. And it's already available on Spectrum and C64, under the title of Project Stealth Fighter.

Stealth technology is now available, what with the B2 Bomber and F117A Fighters. The latter is the subject of the latest simulation from Microprose - only when they were designing the game, the plane was top-secret, and had a working title of F19.

This oddly-shaped title plane is just the job for sneaking into places where it isn't wanted, blowing up a few enemy bases and cruising away, leaving the opposition perplexed as to where you came from and, indeed, where you went. After selecting your mission and difficulty level, all that's left to do is take off, complete the assigned task and return home. If you're successful you'll receive a slap on the back and, if you were really good, a medal or promotion. Failure, however, brings tears and demerit from your colleagues in the bar - that's if you make it back to base at all.

Once the Sidewinders are locked on the MiG there's no escape!

ST

F-19 Stealth Fighter is quite different from the vast majority of flight simulations which we've seen over the past few months. Whereas the others send you on an out-and-out killing spree, this one is much more strategy-orientated, where some people may find a little off-putting. That said, when you're participating in a conventional war in Eastern Europe and the full force of the Warsaw Pact is breathing down your jet's tail, the action can hardly be called 'reluctant'. The overall playing area is vast: if you thought that Falcon was big at a few hundred square miles, you'll be staggered at F-19's half-million, split across the four highly detailed combat zones, riddled with SAM sites, enemy tanks, aircraft and so on. An impressive sim, made even better value by the usual stack of bumps found inside Microprose's packages, F-19 Stealth Fighter offers an informative and exciting look at the USAF's sneakiest piece of kit.

ST £24.99

The first thing that strikes you about this game is the 3D - it's so fast! It's even more impressive when you consider the detail that's gone into the city. Typical urban features like roads, trees, rivers and lamp posts are combined with masses of buildings. The gameplay is just as good: it's like a complicated version of Non-agen's Buckleash, with several objectives at once. Bounty from destroyed enemies allows you to spend more cash improving your skimmer with everything from high-powered engines and fuel sacker missiles to armour patches and machine guns. This is in addition to the main aim of eliminating the drug runners, a task aggravated by the high intelligence level of the bad guys: once they know where you are, they hide and lay strategic mines designed to lure you to your doom. If you like playing with a challenge, this is well worth a look - if a tad expensive for only twelve levels.

COMBO RACER

BY GREMLIN

If motorbikes and sidecars make you think of Arthur driving the pregnant Olive to hospital in On The Buses, or possibly some George Formby film you once saw on BBC2 years ago, you're obviously not feeling well and should probably get out in the fresh air a bit more.

Well-adjusted individuals who always get off with gits at parties associate motorbikes and sidecars with the rip-roaring sport of Combo Racing. This involves teams of two people, one of whom rides a very fast motorcycyle while the other cradles it in a bullet-shaped sidecar, clinging on for dear life while leaning left and right to help swing the combination around corners.

Gremlin have computerised the sport and made it into a one or two player game. With two players, one steers the bike as per any other motor racing game, while the other pushes left and right on the joystick to lean the "passenger" into the bends.

You and your partner can ride in individual races or take part in tournaments, and when you get bored of that, there's always the full-function track editor to mess around with.

UPDATE

There are no plans for a 3D version of this one, alas, but an ST version is due out as you read this, also priced at £24.99.

There are so many 3D road racers around at the moment that I wasn't expecting anything new from Combo Racer. But when I loaded up the game and started playing I was surprised to find that it's a very playable, even competitive variation on the standard/race game. The graphics are good but not exceptional, but you hardly notice that because the action is so fast. The two-player option is really good and demands a lot of interaction between the driver and the passenger, but playing with the computer in the sidecar is good fun too. The sound effects and music are excellent, and the sound of the engine even changes as you drive through a tunnel. As if that wasn't recommendation enough, Combo Racer also features the most comprehensive track editor I've ever seen which lets you build up a library of new courses by adding bits the built-in tracks, put in hills, tunnels and even change the scenery which scrolls along the horizon!

LIVERPOOL

BY GRANDSLAM

The name Liverpool has been synonymous with all that is best about English football for more years than anyone cares to remember. Some of the world's best players are either on the club's books or have been at some stage, and the team have won more Division One championships than any other in the League. So, at a time when the world and his wife are going rather crazy now that the World Cup is underway, it seems only right that there should be a computer game based on the Anfield crew.

After being greeted by a rendition of the club anthem - You'll Never Walk Alone - the player can choose from a menu screen to start a new season, continue an old one, compete against the computer or a friend and either load or save a current game. Another menu gives the option to view the week's fixtures, the league table and the highest scorers in Division One, as well as the opportunity to pick your side, and play a friendly or a league game. The match itself is displayed in horizontally scrolling 3D, similar to that used in Emlyn Hughes International Soccer, with each half lasting around five minutes. The aim? To score more goals than the opposition, of course, and ultimately, to secure your team's place at the top of the table just like the real Liverpool have done so many times before.

▲ Kick off (a much better game)

AMSTRAD £9.99

Being an avid supporter of the Kop, I've been eagerly anticipating the release of the official computer game. Now it's arrived, all I can say is...okay, okay, yes, yes. The boys certainly haven't done good with Liverpool, combining abominably poor graphics with abominably sluggish gameplay, resulting in a product which doesn't deserve to be in a local pub league, never mind the first division. The players are atrociously designed, the pitch is jerkily beyond belief and scrolling is mind-numbingly slow. Controls are unresponsive, players get stuck together when face-to-face, and it's possible to score from some very dodgy positions. And if that's not bad enough, there are some extremely annoying "features" such as, when the ball is kicked into touch, all the players run away as if the thing were booby-trapped, then several seconds later, a man who's positioned miles away suddenly starts along to take the throw-in. Never before has there been such a disparity in the computer footballing world as Liverpool - The Computer Game, it's a game of two halves, both of them absolutely dire.

COWABUN

There's no stopping them - Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles are set to take Britain by storm! C+VG's resident Turtle-maniac Julian Rignall recently visited America to bring you this advanced report on all things in a half-shell. He also saw the Turtle film and was more than impressed...

When Peter Laird and Kevin Eastman first conceived a Ninja Turtle on a Macintosh laptop several years ago, little did they know that a phenomenon had just been born. They developed the drawing into a full-blown cartoon strip and, using a loan from an uncle and an unexpected tax rebate, they launched their own comic. Now, the Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles (or Ninja Turtles as they're known in America - the wacky old BBC replaced the hard-sounding "Ninja" with "Hero") are some of the most well-known cartoon characters in the world.

READ THE COMICS

In the UK there are two types of Turtle comic - one is based on the TV cartoon series, while the other is a more adult strip based on the original Eastman and Laird concepts. A new series of books and comics based on the film have also recently appeared, but unlike the former two they are presently unavailable in the UK.

WATCH THE TV

What about Turtles TV? Well, a new series of the popular cartoon show is currently being screened on American networks (watch for it soon on BBC). The first series is now available on a collection of four videos (buy a burger at any Burger King in the UK and you can buy them for a mere £1.75 each! Go on).

COLLECT THE TOYS

The sheer amount of Turtle merchandising in the USA is incredible. For starters there's a brilliant range of large (highly detailed 18 inch) and small (4 inch) Turtle figures, featuring all the favourite heroes and villains - and that means all four Turtles, as well as Splinter, April, Casey Jones, the Hun, Yakuza Yagumo, Shredder, Bane, Rocksteady, Big Mouser, Foot Soldiers and Macadamia to name but a few. There's also a range of rockily toys, mini figures, metal collections, badges, jewelry, furniture, bed-kimonos, wallpaper...

UNGA!

EAT THE FOOD

Four words: Turtles breakfast cereal. Into your Turtles bowl, open a packet of Turtles cookies, drink from your Turtles mug, and tuck into the Turtles snacks and bubble gum. All eaten off your Turtles tray. Personally I prefer pizza - but hold the anchovies!

PLAY THE GAME

As you've already seen in the mag, American software house Ultra Games has produced a TMNT game on Nintendo, Amiga, C64 and PC. At present only the Nintendo version is widely available - the others can only be bought through specialist software shops (check the black and white ads in C+VG for more details. And always phone first to make sure the dealer has the game in stock). As yet, no British software house has the rights to produce a European version of the game - maybe we'll just have to make do with the American game?

Most coin-op fans will surely have played the excellent TMNT machine that appeared in arcades recently. It's a great game and surprisingly the computer rights are still up for grabs. But as soon as someone signs it up we'll be the first to tell you.

SEE THE FILM

WEAR THE CLOTHES

Cheer! Yes indeed! You can buy Turtle T-shirts, sweat shirts, track suits, jumpers, trousers, basketball caps and socks! And a Turtle bag to put them in. And if you're feeling hungry...

And, there's one other avenue of Turtle game licensing yet to be explored...

The Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles film (that will also be the British title by the way) is currently smashing box office records in the USA, and it's easy to see why. Using awesome state-of-the-art costumes and masks, and very special special effects, the antics of the green-banded quartet and their master, Splinter, are portrayed in realistic, fights-a-plenty, nunchuck-mega-bop action! Hey Gude! This is no cartoon!

The story opens with the crime rate soaring in New York. Could this be the fault of the evil Shredder and his large ninja army, the Foot clan? Could be! And the only "people" who can save the day are the four heroes in a nutshell. Roll up Raphael, Donatello, Mikeyangelo and Leonardo and their blades. Splinter is do some serious Foot stomping!

To tell you any more of the story would ruin the film - so make sure you get to see it when it's released over here at Christmas. The Turtles are going to be humungous!

The Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles have certainly over-sung their way into this issue with a vengeance, what with the dominance of the Nintendo cart. Although the two are essentially the same, the console version would much rather than the others, simply due to the fact that it was designed as a console game. The graphics are great, a bit on the blocky side at times but with lots of colour and some nice additions such as the opening title sequence which shows the turtles being transformed into their mutant alter-egos. The game itself is very, very tough - we've been playing for quite a while now and still haven't scratched the surface. However, this high level of difficulty isn't at all frustrating, in fact it only adds to the overall pleasure of the product. Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles really is a super cartridge, and what a move, it's now being given away free with the console it sells! While basketball, baseball, volleyball and tennis have all long since been converted to the PC engine, football fans have been sadly neglected. Until now.

In Formation Soccer, up to four people can (using a joy pad too) play friendly matches or World Cup tournaments. Choose a country, then select your team formation and automatic or manual goalkeeper (the autogoalkeeper follows the ball, but you have to hit the button to make him jump for it).

Whatever your team, the players are always an energetic bunch, kicking it up and down the scintillating pitch, chasing and trapping the ball, slide tackling, elegant kicking and heading in spectacular Maradona style. The player nearest the ball is usually under joystick control, but you can select a new one by pressing the FUNK button. The two fire buttons control kick strength (pass or boot up the field), as well as strength of throw-ins.

No aspect of the game has been ignored and as well as throw-ins, Formation Soccer can cope with free kicks, penalties, corners and goal kicks.

I remember the day Sir Stanley said to me, "Ben, a console football simulation is a game of two halves, and at the end of the day it's the programmer who gives 100%, that does brilliant." Well, right you were, Sir! And if you were alive today I'm sure you'd agree with me when I say that Formation Soccer is the best console soccer game anywhere. The combination of fast gameplay and very realistic graphics (it may be coincidence, but the England goalkeeper even looks a bit like Peter Shilton) are instantly attractive, and the flexibility of the control method makes it very easy to set up moves and passing plays. Beginners might be put off by the daunting abilities of the computer team (which is always Japan, not surprisingly), making them a difficult bunch to beat. If you have the facilities to play against someone else, though, the action is nothing short of terrific - really fast, action-packed, end-to-end stuff which you may find is even more addictive than watching the real thing during World Cup seasons.

GOLFAMANIA

BY SEGA

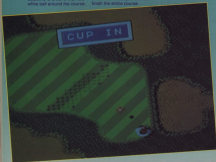

Time for tea? No there isn't, as put that (Putter) cup down and join the club - the Golfmania club, that is. It's an arcade-style golfing sim, not unlike the World Masters series.

Using a second-person perspective 3D view as well as from a bird's-eye view after the shot has been taken, your objective is to send that little white ball around the course, taking as few shots as possible to put it in each hole.

You have a full range of clubs available, from the long-range woods to the more precise irons, and you're going to need the lot, as well as more than a smattering of skill, if you're to avoid the various hazards such as lakes, trees and bunkers. At the end of the game your score is shown, determined by the amount of shots you took to finish the entire course.

SEGA

There has only been one other golfing game on the Sega, and while it was quite playable, it's not a patch on Golfmania. Everything about this is classy - high-quality graphics (both 3D and overhead views), atmospheric sound effects and lively tunes, an effective control system and, most importantly, challenging and addictive gameplay. There are a wide range of options, from choosing the golfer you wish to control (although they're not really supposed to be the real players, some of them do look a lot like the likes of Greg Norman and Barry Slater/Whelan) to selecting the type of tournament in which to compete, either a simple practice knockabout or a full-blown eighteen holes. Sports games seem to work very well on the Master System, and Golfmania is certainly no exception. A good looking, no-hassle arcade simulation which should go down well with the slightly-heavier gamers among you.

FINAL BLOW

BY TAITO

Ever wanted to know what it's like to be repeatedly smashed in the gut by a Mike Tyson-like boxer? Now's your chance to find out in Final Fight, a conversion of Taito's boxing coin-op.

Of course, if you're any good at the game, you'll be giving as good as you get in the toe-to-toe slugging contest of violence. Three minutes is all you get against an opponent. Three minutes is all it takes to knock him down three times to win outright, or to subvert him by the time the bell rings by landing more hits than he.

There are four different opponents to go against. Beat them all and you play them again, only this time they're even tougher. Beat them all again and you become the World Boxing Champ and everyone will think you're brilliant.

£31.90

Doing very large, nicely drawn and animated screen-high sprites, Final Blow is an impressive-looking boxing game. At first the speed of the action isn't gutting, with the opponent taking rip with a flurry of blows which quickly floor your boxer. However, it's surprisingly easy to get into action, and becomes very gratifying at landing a variety of deadly jabs, blows and uppercuts on your opponent's head and body. In fact, it's this ease of mastering the game that is Final Blow's downfall. The first four boxes can be beaten within a sitting, and it doesn't take long to knock them all out second time round, leaving lasting appeal limited. Fans of the arcade game will certainly enjoy this conversion, but if you're a competent games player, you might find that you don't really get your money's worth out of this one.

Abstract

— Controversial. The 32 pages in monthly magazine is essential reading for those interested in advertising or the playing game. Written by experts, Controversial has covered everything from how to place a Master in motion to the "Right Answer?" You know, not just the Master Ray Brown as "The Boss Operator," but also the secrets of PAPA's, POP's, MAMA's, PAPA's, Mama's and Papa's. The Magazine, Nov., and more.

— Adapt. Written by Margaret Savory, author of The Power, exclusively for members of Officer's Quarterly. Adapted by a group adventure and Ancient Greece. In Amu's story, the prince, Great Death of Fate, the immortal Hydra, the goddess Fortuna (personification of fortune) and the goddess of the underworld, Hades, are the main characters. The story is set in the time of the Trojan War.

BATTLE COMMAND

OCEAN

If you were one of the many fans of Ramblin's Carrier Command, you'd best start fattening the piggy bank now 'cuz the sequel is soon to be sliding down the launch ramp. Like the original, Battle Command is being programmed by 3D-meisters, Realtime. Unlike the original, it's going to be released by Ocean. The other difference is that you control a kind of megatank with a choice of several dozen jup-jup-fishing, tank-busting, missile- and destroying missions to carry out. Kill yourself out with all sorts of lasers, missiles, mortars and daisy devices then put your vehicle and gear and kick some un-requered ass. Sounds great, looks good, reviews soon.

THE SPY WHO LOVED ME

DOMARK

Those Domark boys are certainly milking their "jacob" license for all it's worth! The latest in the 007 series sees the player stepping into the swanky suits and even swankier Lotus Esprit Turbo of the indelible Bond who, with the assistance of the stunning K00l agent Angela Ammons, must pit his wits against the devilish Karl Stromberg, who has hijacked a couple of nuclear subs with which he intends to hold the world to ransom. What this spells, game-wise, is a Spy Hunter-esque romp with more than a smidgen of extras, such as the ability to transform the Esprit into a

NIGHTBREED

OCEAN

Here are some dead early pics of Ocean's game of the upcoming Clive Barker horror flick. The movie is actually based on Barker's novel, Cabal, which centres on the adventures of a fellow who becomes a member of the Nightbreed, a bunch of misunderstood undead people who take on all sorts of weird and nasty forms. The game is best described as an adventure with ten arcade sequences, which follow the hero's progress as he attempts to defeat the innocents of the Breed, dodge its nastier elements and hunt down a homicidal doctor.

MIDNIGHT RESISTANCE

OCEAN

Anyone who's been in an arcade recently won't need much of an introduction to this game, but just in case there's someone out there who hasn't played it, here's the spiel. You and a mercenary chum have to tag it through an alien complex blasting seven shades of shoe polish out of the multitude of screaming troops and combat vehicles. There are stacks of extra weapons to collect, and the whole thing is a riot of blasting lefts. The pic

FLOOD ELECTRONIC ARTS

Nothing to do with the fabulous They Might Be Giants album of the same name, alas, but this game from Bullfrog (programmers of Fusion, Populous and Dragon's Breath) looks equally wacky and fun. You play an endearing little green blob by the name of Gully who has to evacuate his underground home when it starts to flood. There are 20 levels of decidedly odd-looking caves packed with equally odd-looking monsters all after Gully's blood, but before he can escape from each level he has to find several unlikely treasures. Gunguisome fun as plenty, that's for um sure.

RUFF AND REDDY

HI-TEC

Anyone who is stupid enough to be out of bed at around seven o'clock on a weekday morning will probably have caught a hazy glimpse of the Ruff And Reddy cartoon show on TV-AM. If you haven't (and we don't blame you) it stars a happy-go-lucky cat called Ruff and a sickeningly sweet dog called Reddy, who get up to all sorts of wacky adventures. In the game the bawdy pair crash-land their rocket on a planet inhabited by Lili-Punies - a race of small, blue aliens - who kidnap Reddy and order Ruff to search for and rescue twenty Lili-Punies who, while exploring a neighbouring planet, have become either lost or captured. What ensues is quite a jolly looking arcade adventure, in which Ruff must negotiate the four areas of the planet to rescue those pesky Lili-Punies. PGA TOUR GOLF ELECTRONIC ARTS

It's the mother of I feel sorry for, during this summer of nothing but sport. What with THAT soccer tournament on the telly, and a whole range of sports sims on computer, they're going to go mad! The latest is a tie-in with the US PGA Tour, in which you take on the role of one of 68 golfing greats like Fuzzy Zoeller and Paul Azinger (well-known shapes, those two) and tee-off on any of four courses, Sterling Shores, Ararat, Sawgrass and West Stadium. Graphically, it looks like a winner, with effective 3D and a TV style "fly-by" view to give the competitor a glance at what he's up against. If the gameplay - which promises to include all the decisions which a real pro must make, such as choosing clubs, checking the ball lie, and selecting correct shots - matches the high standard of presentation, Electronic Arts could be sitting on something a bit good.

TORVAK THE WARRIOR CORE

If I were to say that this next game features a muscled-and-furk with a big weapon, you may think that it sounds a tad on the daisy side. But that's exactly what Torvak is - in fact, he has a load of massive weapons, from a breast-severer to a laddy-busting double-headed axe! Why is he carrying such hefty armaments around, though? Because he's just returned to his homeland to find that his whole family, along with the rest of his clan, have been massacred by the minions of the Necromancer. Obviously, he's not ecstatic

CORPORATION CORE

The first of two products announced by Core's newly-formed software label is a 3D arcade adventure set in the future. The UCC Universal Cybernetics Corporation, having made a name for itself in a new range of "work-anywhere, do-anything" androids, are dropping us rather a lot in the teals, who suspect that the multi-national has embarked on a project to create the ultimate killing machine - physically human, but genetically far more advanced than any man or robot. Of course, UCC deny all allegations, but that hasn't stopped the Government from employing an agent from the internationally renowned espionage firm ZODIAC, to enter the UCC plant and track down one of the "super-fell". And you're the chap who gets the contract! Gate-crash the UCC factory, and use all your available equipment to foil the ultra hi-tech security system, consisting of robots, closed-circuit TV cameras, and alarms - and that's just the defenses that you can see! From what we've seen of Corporation, and judging by the spectacular screenshots already here, Core have a gem of a game for their first release. Look out for a review in a month or so! What's so unreal about this latest Ubi Soft game? Well, the planet on which it is based, for a start. That's its name, you see, and it's where you, as the hero Artaban, will take your pit dragon and go off in search of their friend (and Artaban's sister) Isolda, who has been abducted by the forces of Chaos. Almost wiped out by the evil insectoid, Cephalhydras, they've got to living in a number of small, hi-tech colonies whose sole task is to find a way of defeating their ruthless enemy before a similar fate befalls them. Unfortunately, Cephalhydras is one step ahead of the game, and has created Genetyn, a reproductive brood-mother who can produce a whole army of super-warriors. Professor Julius Gordon, before being killed by the enemy, found out the co-ordinates of Genetyn's secret hideaway and stored them on a series of disks, which he dispersed to a number of planets. Thing is, why didn't he just lock them in a locker at Kings Cross and give the key to his Aunt Doris? Anyway, that's the storyline, you've gotta hop aboard the
